Silver coins found in Louňovice pod Blaníkem. In memory of Pavel Radoměrský (1926–2008)

The silver coins of small denominations (93 pieces) mostly from the central European territory found in Louňovice pod Blaníkem after 1962 (?) could be compared to another larger hoard found there in 1962 and described by Pavel Radoměrský. Archaeological context for the coins described here is known partially, but the content of the hoard shows high degree of comparability with the previous hoard dealing with geographical, chronological and denominational distribution. The latest coins safely dating the hoard are represented by three-grossi pieces struck under the Polish King Sigismund III in 1607 and 1608. Identical pieces produced in the very same years, plus one struck in 1610, were identified as the latest issues also in the older hoard. In this study, selected data for individual pieces of both hoards are compared from various statistical points of view.
