Denier struck under Charles I the Great in Cologne and found near Kostelní Hlavno

The denier struck under Charles I the Great in Cologne and found near Kostelní Hlavno represents the third find of this sort with coins of this ruler and the fifth case with the Carolingian coins found in the Bohemian territory. The denier produced under Charles II the Bald in Aquitania and found at the Šárka hillfort (Prague 1964) was the first Carolingian coin discovered in Bohemia, some 70 deniers of Louis II the Pious found in Jedomělice (Kladno district 2006) represent the second case, the third hoard of four Italian deniers from Pavia struck under Charles I the Great comes from the Hradec hillfort near Hudčice (Příbram district 2007), and the fourth coin is represented by the denier struck under Charles I the Great in Amiens and found at the Tismice hillfort (Kolín district 2011). The mentioned finds of the Carolingian coins in Bohemia significantly enrich our knowledge about monetary circulation of that period, and they represent an important historical source which can help us to change our view of the earliest Bohemian history.
