Some interesting Prague grossi struck under Vladislaus II Jagiello. Notes on chronology

In the case of the Prague grossi struck under Vladislaus II, the word GRACIA (instead of usual GRATIA) is rarely found in their obverse marginal legend. All grossi with GRACIA in their marginal legend are classified in the group dated in these days between 1477 and 1479. Because of some doubts about correctness of this dating, detailed chronological classification of the pieces with GRACIA in their marginal legend can offer important data for revision of chronology of the Prague grossi produced under Vladislaus II at the beginning of his rule. The very rare Prague grossus struck under Vladislaus II with mark of a quadruple annulet can demonstrate importance of detailed analysis of the coin image for chronology of these series. Identification of punch—marks used during the die production also plays an important role.
